guiding the class discussion on the day on which your topic is discussed. Your participation in the discussion will count toward your participation grade. Because it is critical that a number of students be prepared to discuss the subject on the day the subject is discussed, only a limited number of students will be allowed to sign up for each topic. A sign up sheet will be passed around the class well in advance of the first topic.

Academic Honesty

Every assignment that you turn in will be subject to the most rigorous standards of academic honesty. Plagiarism is deceptively tempting these days, with many sources available online. Do not be deceived. All work produced in this course must be the student's own original work that has been prepared for this course alone. Any violation of this expectation will be taken seriously. If you have any questions about plagiarism, whether use of a particular source is appropriate, or how to appropriately document a source, you should confer with me or another faculty member. You are responsible for familiarizing yourself with the official policy on academic honesty, which you can find in the Holy Cross catalog and on the college website; you might also go to www.plagiarism.org, and click on "Research Resources."

You should consult the course catalog for the official procedures surrounding plagiarism charges, which I will follow. In summary, should I find evidence of plagiarism, I will record a zero for the assignment, meet with you to discuss the charges, and report them to the department chair and to your class dean. You will be able to request a formal review of the charge. If the charge is upheld, the zero will remain. While this does not mean that you will automatically fail the class, given the significance of each assignment in the tallying of your final grade, a zero will make it exceedingly unlikely that you will receive a grade that is satisfactory to you.

Special Classes

On Wednesday, February 1, at 6:30, the class will meet in a mandatory special session at a location to be announced. This class serves two purposes. First, it serves as a makeup class for the day we miss on March 2, due to a conference I must attend. Second, it will be a general writing workshop that addresses writing for political science generally, and the research paper component of the course specifically. Because the class is a make-up, it is required. Because it touches on such a critical component of your grade, it is highly recommended that you attend. It is my hope that this class session will be highly useful for you both for this class and for classes that you attend later in your college career. Please make plans now to attend this session.

Also, on a date to be arranged, the class will attend a lecture by Prof. David Lowenthal on Abraham Lincoln's political thought. As the course spends some time on Lincoln, the subject matter is particularly relevant; this lecture will be required for all students enrolled in the course.

Finally, on April 21, Prof. Paul Cantor of the University of Virginia will be delivering a talk on political culture in America after September 11. As political culture's influence on the political process is a critical theme of the course, this lecture will also be required for all students enrolled in the course.

I reserve the right to schedule additional classes in the event that a regularly scheduled class must be cancelled. In lieu of a classroom lecture, such additional classes may be scheduled speakers appearing at Holy Cross.

Office Hours

My office hours are not just the times that I happen to be on campus; I encourage you to view my office hours as an extended class time. If you have questions about the material that I have not clarified in class, if you have a particular insight that you would like to share, or if you are having a difficult time with the material and would like some
